In a Chaotic Year, Mother Nature Piles On

Top Ten Topics: Third Quarter 2020

The coronavirus crisis continued to dominate the attention of prominent figures in the food industry, with food insecurity leading a long list of concerns in the third quarter of 2020. The ongoing impact of unemployment — a result of pandemic-containment policies — greatly increased the number of Americans who face hunger each day. This, in turn, led to debates about the best policies to aid foodinsecure Americans.

Adding supply chain disruptions to the picture made companies' food waste policies even more pertinent, setting the stage for future restructuring. Businesses have begun reconsidering their goals for stewardship, workforce and production practices.

We examined these factors earlier this quarter in our Four Forces Inspiring Food Brands perspective.

Even as the coronavirus pandemic continued to disrupt food systems, extreme weather events claimed the second spot in this quarter's ranks. The weather generally garners more attention in the third quarter with the arrival of harvest and the peak of hurricane season. This year, it was nearly enough to compete with the pandemic.

Additionally, we sifted through the presidential candidates' policies for topics relevant to food and agriculture. The accompanying piece, Ag on the Ballot, can be found on Page 3.

Highlights from this report:

HUNGER

The pandemic deepened the country's hunger crisis. Influential conversations focused on the role of school lunches and other federal food aid programs in reducing food insecurity.

WEATHER

Extreme weather events threatened the harvest. Natural disasters, ranging from hurricanes and a derecho to drought and wildfires, affected food producers across the nation. Worries about the weather weighed heavily on farmers as the growing season came to an end.

STEWARDSHIP

Major food brands reevaluated their supply chains. Companies all along the supply chain — including Walmart, McDonald's, General Mills and Cargill — directed efforts toward increasing regenerative agriculture practices.

Although the pandemic has disrupted many things, it has not stopped the campaigns of President Donald Trump or former Vice President Joe Biden. The Biden campaign has laid out detailed policy plans while the Trump administration has pledged to extend its past efforts. Here we focus on how their agendas will affect key food and agricultural production issues.

	TRUMP	BIDEN
	"I'll tell you, you can go back to Abraham Lincoln and there's no President that's treated the farmers like Trump."  — President Donald Trump (White House)	"As president, Biden will strengthen our agriculture sector by pursuing a trade policy that works for farmers, supporting beginning farmers, fostering the development of regional food systems, promoting biofuels, and partnering with farmers to achieve netzero emissions, giving farmers new sources of income in the process."  — Biden Campaign
Trade	Used tariffs extensively in a trade war with China, resulting in lower agriculture exports from the United States	Will work with allies to pressure China
	Signed the "Phase One" trade deal with China to recover ag exports  Has threatened to withdraw from the WTO	Will remain in WTO
Workers	Has not increased the minimum wage  Has restricted immigration, with exemptions for farmworkers	Will raise federal minimum wage to $15/hr.
		Supports unions, including for farmworkers
		Would provide path to citizenship for immigrant farmworkers
Business	Has focused on deregulation, such as cutting taxes, delisting endangered species and repealing WOTUS	Will use antitrust laws to address consolidation in meatpacking industry
Sustainability	Administration committed to boosting farm production by 40% while lowering environmental footprint by 50% by 2050	Will expand Conservation Stewardship Program
		Will rely on farmers' ability to sequester carbon in soil as part of a plan to reach net-zero greenhouse gas emissions
Ethanol	Expanded use of waivers that allow oil refiners to blend in less ethanol	Will increase ethanol use as part of plan to boost renewable energy sources
	Lifted limits on E15 blends of gasoline	Terremanie eriergy sources

ACRONYM KEY:

WTO: World Trade Organization | WOTUS: Waters of the United States rule (an update to the Clean Water Act) | E15: gasoline blended with 15% ethanol
